53 communities declare states of emergency

Flooding in Saskatchewan. Costs will likely exceed $360 million spent in 2011, premier says

MORGAN MODJESKI
Metro in Saskatoon

The number of Saskatchewan communities that have declared states of emergency due to days of heavy rain in the province's southeast corner has jumped to 53 from 36.

In Saskatoon on Tuesday, Premier Brad Wall said they expect that number to climb and explained that the provincial government is assisting communities affected by the floods that he referred to as "unprecedented."

Dispatching rapid-response and sandbag teams to the hardest-hit communities, Wall and other members of Saskatchewan's flood committee will tour affected areas on Wednesday.

Officials said on Monday that parts of southeast Saskatchewan had been hit with more than 240 millimetres of rain this past weekend.

At least 19 sections of highways in eastern Saskatchewan were shut down as of Tuesday.

Evacuations have moved more than 450 people in the region, including about 250 from Gainsborough and some 150 patients from St. Peter's Hospital in Melville, approximately 145 kilometres northeast of Regina, as a creek behind the facility rose on Tuesday.

Despite the evacuations, the Ministry of Government Relations emergency management and fire safety commissioner, Duane McKay, said they've had no reports of injuries.

Patrick Boyle, spokesman with the provincial Water Security Agency (WSA), said dry conditions expected in the coming week will help.

However, the WSA will monitor the Qu'Appelle Basin as water from swollen creeks and streams drains into the larger system.

Staff with the WSA and Government Relations are offering relief through the Emergency Flood Damage Reduction Program.

As a result of the flooding, Wall said, costs to the province are expected to exceed the $360 million spent due to Saskatchewan floods in 2011 — $200 million of which was covered by federal relief.

Regina begins storm wreckage cleanup

Rainstorms. Mayor Michael Fougere said around 9.7 cm of rain fell in Regina between Saturday and Monday

City of Regina crews have started cleaning the wreckage left by heavy rainstorms this past weekend.

Raw sewage spilled out of manholes as water seeped into basements and underpasses flooded after a torrential downpour — which also severely hit several southeastern Saskatchewan communities — overwhelmed Regina's sewer system.

Around 9.7 centimetres of rain fell in Regina between Saturday and Monday, Mayor Michael Fougere told reporters at the city's waterworks office on Tuesday.

"We're now primarily on the cleanup mode, which is a good sign … after the rain over the past 48 hours, which is significant," Fougere said.

Sewer and drainage crews have begun cleaning streets and decontaminating areas where sewage has overflowed, according to sewer and drainage operations manager Helene Henning-Hill. They aim to finish cleaning within the next week, she added.

In most Regina neighbourhoods, storm water and sewage are usually deposited into separate water systems. A few areas, however, have cross-connected systems.

"Everyone knows that our infrastructure is aging … and as a result of this significant rain event, we had both systems impacted and at full capacity," Henning-Hill said.

The city will analyze the storm's aftermath to plan changes to the two water systems.

"Over the next year, we'll have a better plan in place on how we move forward with our system improvements," Henning-Hill said.

In the meantime, city council will consider Regina's application to the Provincial Disaster Assistance Program (PDAP) on Wednesday. PDAP compensates residents for uninsurable damages sustained through natural disasters. Eligible claims can include cleanup costs, structural repairs and restoration and preventative measures.

The city received more than 500 calls on the weekend regarding basement water, plugged catch basins and flooded intersections, according to Henning-Hill.

"Based on preliminary calls, 50 homes have been impacted with actual floodings and more with seepage," said emergency manager Jay O'Connor.

The last time the city applied to PDAP was in 2013.

"I would estimate that this has been worse than 2013," O'Connor said. "But we're hoping by the weekend to have PDAP begin."

Rain no match for Reginans celebrating Canada Day

'We deserve to have some fun.' People gathered at Willow Island to catch fireworks

SARAH TAGUIAM
sarah.taguiam@metronews.ca

Reginans didn't let a weekend of heavy rain dampen their moods as thousands came decked in red and white to Wascana Park to celebrate Canada Day on Tuesday.

Heavy downpours beat down on Regina all weekend, but clear skies came in time for the national holiday.

"I'm pretty surprised that a lot of people still came despite all the floods," said Regina resident Matthew Bossenberry.

"But everyone wants to celebrate today, and I think that's a pretty Canadian thing to do."

The legislative grounds were filled with entertainers, concession stands, live music and some Canada Day staples including a strongman competition, dog shows, face-paint booths and children's games.

"It's good to see a lot of people out and enjoying the day, because it's been pretty gloomy with all the rain and we deserve to have some fun," said Steve "DJ Quartz" Ward, who was spinning music by the shore of Wascana Lake.

Fireworks were scheduled for around 10:30 p.m. at Willow Island and by the afternoon, onlookers were already setting up around the shore in anticipation.

Michelle Verner, who moved to Regina from Ireland last year, was patiently waiting for the fireworks with her three sons.

"We've been here since noon and it's been a long day, but we're really hoping to see the fireworks," Verner said.

"I'm really glad the sun came out and we can stay and enjoy it."

Sheepdogs' lead guitarist set to go his own way

Saskatchewan's Sheepdogs and their lead guitarist have decided to split.

On Tuesday, Leot Hanson, one of the founding members of the Saskatoon-based band, confirmed to Metro that he is no longer a member of the Sheepdogs. Details had yet to be released.

In a Facebook message on Tuesday, Hanson wrote, "Right now its (sic) a tricky situation because things are still be (sic) resolved, but I'm def (sic) not in the band anymore."

The Sheepdogs gained an international following after winning the Rolling Stone's Choose the Cover contest in 2011, which saw Hanson and vocalist Ewan Currie, bass player Ryan Gullen and drummer Sam Corbett grace the cover of the Aug. 18, 2011, issue of the iconic entertainment magazine.

On Tuesday, Metro reached out to Gullen shortly before the Sheepdogs were set to perform at the Edgefest event in Toronto. Gullen said all interview requests about Hanson's departure should be directed to the band's publicist.

Attracting a massive fan base across Canada, the Sheepdogs have won a number of accolades including the 2012 Juno Award for rock album of the year for Learn & Burn, the 2012 Juno for new group of the year and the Juno in 2012 for single of the year, for the song I Don't Know.

Face-veil ban upheld

Human rights court. 2010 French law that bans face-covering veils on the street is ruled legitimate

The European Court of Human Rights on Tuesday upheld France's law banning face-covering Muslim veils from the streets, in a case brought by a woman who claimed her freedom of religion was violated.

The ruling by the Strasbourg-based court was the first of its kind since France passed a law in 2010 that forbids anyone to hide his or her face in an array of places, including the street.

The court's Grand Chamber rejected the arguments of the French woman in her mid-20s, a practising Muslim not identified by name.

She said she doesn't hide her face at all times, but when she does, it is to be at peace with her faith, her culture and convictions.

The court ruled that the law's bid to promote harmony in a diverse population is legitimate and doesn't breach the European Convention on Human Rights.

Critics of the ban, including human rights defenders, contend the law targets Muslims and stigmatizes Islam.

His lawyers had argued that the alleged plots were really fantasy online role play. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Sarkozy. Ex-president questioned over alleged $50M from Gadhafi

Former French president Nicolas Sarkozy, 59, remains popular. LIONEL CIRONNEAU/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS FILE

Former French President Nicolas Sarkozy was in police custody Tuesday, apparently under questioning in an investigation linked to allegations that he took $50 million in illegal campaign funds from Libya's Moammar Gadhafi.

But will the shocking detention and sordid case torpedo Sarkozy's chances at a presidential comeback?

Maybe not.

Sarkozy, a political survivor who's been touring the world with his pop singer wife, is still among the most popular politicians in France despite a pile of investigations that target him.

The 59-year-old hasn't been convicted of anything and remains well-known on the international stage. And he may be his troubled conservative party's best chance to regain the presidency in 2017, after losing it to Socialist Francois Hollande in 2012.

A judicial official said Sarkozy was detained for questioning Tuesday at the headquarters of the judicial police in the Paris suburb of Nanterre.

BFM television said late Tuesday night that Sarkozy was transferred to an investigating judge, who could charge him, name him as a witness, or release him.

French media reports say Sarkozy is being questioned in an investigation linked to financing for his 2007 presidential campaign, notably allegations that late Libyan leader Gadhafi gave Sarkozy illegal campaign donations.

Sarkozy has vigorously denied wrongdoing.

Lac-Mégantic mayor opens up about railway disaster's personal impact

Colette Roy-Laroche. One year after tragedy, Quebec town's 'Granite Lady' talks about how she manages grief after suffering family losses

Mayor Colette Roy-Laroche put on a brave face for the world as she took charge after a deadly railway disaster struck her town, killing 47 people. Few knew she was mourning her own relatives, who were among the dead.

One year after the runaway train destroyed part of Lac-Mégantic, Que., the local leader is opening up about her family's losses in the catastrophe that killed two of her cousins and could have claimed the life of her son.

Roy-Laroche has rarely spoken in public about the tragic July 6, 2013, derailment's impact on her personal life.

She spoke in a recent interview ahead of the first anniversary of a crash that saw a train loaded with volatile crude oil smash into downtown Lac-Mégantic and explode.

Over the past year, Roy-Laroche said she constantly thought about her cousins Jean-Pierre Roy, 56, and Eliane Parenteau, 93, as well as the other victims, even as her long days as mayor consumed much of her life.

"Just passing by the damage every day — several times per day — reminds us," said Roy-Laroche, mayor since 2002. "But despite this, we must continue to move forward. If we let our emotions take over, I think I would just stay at home."

Managing her own grief has become an additional demand of the job for Roy-Laroche as she tries to help rebuild the community of nearly 6,000 people, which saw much of its downtown core wiped out.

That emotional balancing act started right after the first explosion. With flames devouring her town, she took on her unprecedented mayoral duties that night despite the dread her loved ones could be caught in the inferno.

For hours, Roy-Laroche said she feared her son, Frederic Laroche, was among the dozens missing in the early-morning catastrophe. After the first blast, she drove as close to the fire as she could.

"I said to myself, 'I hope Frederic isn't there,'" said Roy-Laroche, who discovered the next morning that he was safe at home.

She believes that was thanks, in part, to the fact she was unavailable to babysit for him. Otherwise, she said, he would have likely been at the Musi-Café bar, where more than two dozen people died.

"But this is my story and it's one story among many others like it," she said. "Why wasn't he there? Why were those who were there, there? These are questions we can ask, but we'll never have an answer."

When the tears do come, they usually flow without warning, said Roy-Laroche, who earned the nickname the "Granite Lady" for her calming demeanour and composure during the crisis.

"I think I control my emotions quite well, but at the same time I don't have control of the moment when it pours out," she said.

Ford greeted by boosters, booers during parade

→ See full instructions on Metro's Voices page.

Supporters cheered and critics jeered as an energetic-looking Rob Ford mingled with Toronto revellers Tuesday, a day after his official return from a stint in rehab.

Marching in a Canada Day parade in the city's east end, the scandal-plagued Toronto mayor was greeted with shouts of "disgrace" and "resign" from some in the crowd, which he brushed off by wishing friend and foe alike the best on the country's 147th birthday.

Ford seemed in high spirits despite his detractors and said he was happy to be back.

"It feels great. Absolutely great. Fantastic," he said while his aides handed out mini "Ford Nation" flags and magnets to the crowd.

His march along the parade route was slow and halting, leaving him lagging behind rivals John Tory and Olivia Chow as a steady stream of fans stopped to take their picture with him and shake his hand.

Supporter Helen Papathanasakis said he seems to have benefited from the break.

"He looks relaxed and I think there's a lot of Torontonians who believe in him and we're hoping he's successful," she said.

Others weren't so eager to see Ford among the marchers.

"It's a travesty to have him in the East York parade.... I just don't think I can stand here and not say something against his presence," said Elinor Mahoney. THE CANADIAN PRESS

New gadgets that track your every move

Big business. Tech that gathers data on every waking (and sleeping) moment of the weekend warrior is now a giant $2-billion industry

There was a time not so long ago when sports professionals swore the key to athletic achievement was practice, practice, practice. Now, thanks to a booming $2-billion digital-health industry, there's a whole range of sport-specific tech gadgets that claim to help both professional and amateur athletes train smarter.

"Never before have you been able to so easily gauge your performance," says columnist and self-proclaimed technology evangelist Marc Saltzman. "Information is paramount."

To get you in the game for summer, he picked out his favourite new fitness-tech items at Sport Chek.

BEST FOR TENNIS: BABOLAT PLAY, $450

Billed as the world's first connected tennis racquet, the Babolat Play monitors nearly every aspect of your performance: where the ball has hit the racquet, how many times you've struck the ball, what kind of spins and angles you've put on your shots. "How many times have you used your forehand and backhand? Now you can get that information," Saltzman says. All of the information can be loaded to a smartphone and then shared and compared with fellow connected players around the world.

BEST FOR RUNNERS AND WALKERS: GARMIN VÍVOFIT, $150

Activity trackers that count your steps, stairs and strides per day are nothing new, but this bracelet-style fitness band stands out from the pack thanks to its year-long battery life. It also tracks your sleep patterns and can record food and calorie intake, making it the Big Brother of lifestyle companion devices. LIA GRAINGER/FOR METRO

U.S. Birth-control coverage fight turns store owner into 'hero' for religious right

David Green felt like the black sheep of his family. His five other siblings had followed their preacher father into church work; David went into retail.

But as his business successes mounted, he found his religious calling: using the financial might from his Hobby Lobby arts and crafts chain as an engine for evangelism.

That mission, until recent years carried out largely within the world of Pentecostal Christianity, took the 72-year-old Green all the way to a landmark victory Monday at the U.S. Supreme Court over the birth-control coverage rule in President Barack Obama's health-care overhaul.

"They'll be heroes to the very conservative religious people who are very much against abortion," said Vinson Synan, a friend of the Greens and a prominent scholar of Pentecostal history at Regent University.

The justices ruled 5-4 that requiring closely held companies such as Hobby Lobby to pay for methods of women's contraception to which they object violates the corporations' religious freedom. It was the first time the high court has declared that businesses can hold religious views under federal law in the U.S. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JUST SAYIN'

Paul Sullivan
metronews.ca

It turns out those people wearing the tin foil hats are right:

"They" are messing with our minds.

"They" in this case is Facebook, and "they" decided to find out how we react to an increase or decrease in positive or negative posts by manipulating the news feeds of 600,000-plus randomly selected social media lab rats ... without telling us.

In case you're interested, the more positive posts you see the more positive your posts will be. And as you might expect, negativity breeds negativity.

We only found out because the researchers published the results in a scientific journal on June 17, and the online anger has been building ever since. Finally, on Sunday, the leader of the experiment, one Adam D. I. Kramer, issued an apology: "In hindsight, the research benefits of the paper may not have justified all the anxiety."

Of course, he posted it on his Facebook page.

So, here's the bottom line, fellow lab rats: Facebook is altering the way we behave without telling us. No reason to be alarmed ... much. Excuse me while I rush to the supermarket to stock up on tin foil.

I don't know about you, but I've never trusted Facebook. It is sitting on the accumulated data of nearly 1.3 billion users, and you'd have to be pretty naïve to believe they're just sitting on it.

The spectre of some guy in a white lab coat playing with the emotions of 600,000 unsuspecting people like a cyberspace symphony is creepy enough, but what else are they doing? What else can they do?

Over and over again, we have allowed Facebook and friends to ignore all boundaries so we can communicate better, shop better, get around better, etc. We have committed this sacrifice with the understanding that they will respect us and, as the Google boys like to say, "Don't be evil." Until now, this devil's bargain was merely annoying. In return for a website that connects everyone all the time, Facebook gathers intimate data and sends out embarrassingly appropriate ads for itching powder or toupees.

But once they start poking and prodding your mind for fun without telling you, it's time to reboot. Facebook is starting to sound like the Borg, that alien presence from Star Trek that assimilates everyone in its path into the "hive mind" in the ultimate pursuit of machine perfection. OK, we're not there yet, but in Facebook's creepy assault on our innocence we can see the way, and it's not that far to go.

"Resistance is futile," intones the Borg. Well, maybe. But I have a new tin hat and a heightened sense of vigilance. I won't get fooled again.

Right.

Somme spans 500 feet in mural

Joe Sacco's epic depiction of the first day of the Battle of the Somme has been recreated on the wall of the Paris Metro.

Published last autumn, the acclaimed cartoonist's wordless panorama The Great War picked out the events of the First World War battle, which began 98 years ago on July 1, from the British soldiers who went over the top to the mass burials of the dead.

"It all started when I was playing darts with a friend of mine in New York," he told Agence France-Presse. "'Why don't you do something on the First World War?' he asked. That was 15 years ago."

Now the comic is being shown in the Montparnasse metro station in Paris in a display that runs to 130 metres.

"I'm delighted by this project," said Sacco, according to Le Figaro. "I really believe in public art exhibition, because art is, by its nature, public." THEGUARDIAN.COM

300: Rise of an Empire

Director. Noam Murro

Stars. Gerard Butler, Eva Green

The mere existence of 300: Rise of an Empire is worthy of note, since Gerard Butler's Spartan King Leonidas and his men achieved "a beautiful victory" but sadly lost their heads in the original film. In what is neither prequel nor sequel (maybe we should call it equal), we meet the secret weapon of Rise of an Empire: Women. This highly stylized account, drawn as before from a graphic novel by Frank Miller but under the direction this time of Israel's Noam Murro, has a vibrant lead in Eva Green, playing Artemisia, commander of the Persian navy, who dresses Goth, but acts Amazon. Packing two lethal blades, she's great, giving Rise of an Empire some badly needed energy.
PETER HOWELL

Winter's Tale

Director. Akiva Goldsman

Stars. Colin Farrell, Russell Crowe

Akiva Goldsman turned the silk purse that is author Mark Helprin's original prose and storytelling into the sow's ear of this misbegotten screen adaptation. Enduring this soppy muddle is like being forced to listen at length to a crazy person at a street corner read out old Hallmark greeting cards. Major plot omissions leave us scratching our heads over many things, such as why Colin Farrell's orphan thief character Peter Lake is so hated by Russell Crowe's demonic Pearly Soames, who grunts with a bad Irish accent. PETER HOWELL

Sarandon on the road again with Tammy

In the grandmother scheme of things.
Thelma and Louise star compares notes on her new film vehicle

NED EHRBAR
Metro in Hollywood

Twenty-five years after Thelma and Louise, Susan Sarandon is taking a different kind of on-screen road trip with Tammy. Sarandon stars as the alcoholic, pill-popping grandmother to the titular Tammy (Melissa McCarthy), out to cause trouble across the Midwest.

You've been doing a lot of interesting smaller projects lately, like Ping Pong Summer. And even this, though it stars Melissa McCarthy, is from a first-time director.
Yeah, yeah ... that's hard. I feel a little bit like I've used up my coupons for first-time directors, actually. Mark Duplass called me and told me to do this one, and then Mark and Jay Duplass called me to tell me to do Ping Pong Summer. I always feel like if someone asks you to do something that's a favour to help get a film up and it's a one-and-a-half week commitment, that's a hell of a lot easier than a month and a half.

In your mind, can you connect this film to Thelma and Louise at all?
You know, it's so funny that we didn't think of Thelma and Louise. I mean, it didn't come up. I thought of it, but it didn't really come up while we were filming. We were so focused on what was going on. And then a year later when we went to do the press photo shoot, they had a convertible and a desert setting, and I said, "Are you sure you want to do that? We're about to have another anniversary for Thelma and Louise, and I think there's going to be a lot of that. Do you want to do that comparison?" And they were like, "Oh my God, I never thought of that." And they struck the car! They took the car away! But while we were filming it didn't actually come up. Maybe because it wasn't as cool a car, I don't know.

Susan Sarandon and Melissa McCarthy in Tammy CONTRIBUTED

First-time director

Falcone in a Pearl of a jam

Tammy director Ben Falcone might be a first-timer, but he knows enough to pad his bench with some veteran talent, including Susan Sarandon, Kathy Bates and the film's star — and Falcone's wife — Melissa McCarthy.

You've created quite an interesting grandmother with Susan's character.
Isn't she great? Obviously she's one of the best actors in the world, truly. But she's also super-funny. She has a kind of ... I don't want to say craziness, but she has a freedom to her own life and her own way of thinking that I think she was able to tap into that brought out that kind of past history of Pearl and the depth of flavour that Pearl has, so it wasn't just like, "I'm a granny and I party." You know, instead I believe that Pearl as played by Susan Sarandon did in a non-creepy way go hang out with the Allman Brothers on tour. And you're not like, "That's weird." You're like, "Yeah, if I was the Allman Brothers I would hang out with her, too."

Ben Falcone GETTY IMAGES

And apparently you had some guest writers coming in during the shoot?
That was something we unabashedly stole from Paul Feig and Judd Apatow. What they do is they have somebody who's a really funny writer, and their sole purpose is they come in for a couple of weeks at a time — and they usually switch them out to keep their takes fresh — and their sole purpose is to be there and say, "Is this as funny as it could be?" So we stole that as a model, which was fantastic.

Some filmmakers' egos might not let them do that.
I just want the best possible thing at the end of the day, and if I can get talented people to help, why on earth would I not accept their help?

Or as serious a story.
Right. Although I don't know, I think of Thelma and Louise as being funny up and until the end.

So far during your press tour, how many people have asked to take a selfie with you?
Nobody, nobody! Oh no, one on-camera reporter did. That's so funny that that became such a big thing. We just did it as an afterthought. We did a whole photo session of them uniting us, and there was a Polaroid, and we did do something there. And then we were doing the interview for the Hollywood Reporter, and at the end of it, I said, "Let's just do one," and we did one with my phone. (My dog) Penny tweeted it, and now it's a thing.

Selena Gomez ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Don't tell Selena, but Biebs was 'getting friendly' with a model at a party

Selena Gomez may not like this. Justin Bieber was reportedly getting friendly with model Amber Rose at a party at West Hollywood nightclub Bootsy Bellows recently, according to Radar Online.

"Justin walked over to Amber's private table and they began chatting," a source says. "They talked for more than 15 minutes and even exchanged numbers. She was smiling and laughing." On-again, off-again girlfriend Gomez may have nothing to worry about, as Rose is married to rapper Wiz Khalifa, but the former Disney star has been known to take issue with Bieber's receiving texts from female pals, as she reportedly did when she found out he'd been in contact with Kylie Jenner earlier this year.

Shia LeBeouf

How Shia's arrest netted him a free DVD

Shia LaBeouf has at least gotten something out of his arrest for making a scene during a Broadway performance of Cabaret.

Scott Gorenstein, rep for Liza Minnelli — who starred in the film adaptation of the musical — tells E! News that he generously sent LaBeouf a DVD copy of the 1972 Oscar-winning film. "I figured he may want to find out how it ends," Gorenstein explains. LaBeouf was escorted from the theatre in handcuffs during intermission and taken into custody. In related news, video from a week before the arrest has surfaced on TMZ showing the former Transformers star outside a New York City strip club trying to start a fight with an unidentified bystander. In the video, LaBeouf is seen with his fists up asking the man to punch him in the face before backing down and entering the adult establishment.

Hey guys! Got a case of the back-to-work blues? Here's something to put things in perspective, namely a chilling reminder that addiction is a disease that frequently runs in families. That means the same child an addict once cited as an inspiration for getting clean may grow up to be at greater risk for abusing drugs himself.

Robert Downey Jr.'s son was arrested on Sunday afternoon for cocaine possession. According to ET, 18-year-old Indio Downey was a passenger in a car pulled over by the LAPD near the intersection of Santa Monica Boulevard and La Cienega. He was released Monday morning on $10,000 US bail.

Iron Man star Robert Downey Jr. famously struggled with substance abuse for much of his life, even serving two prison sentences, the first for three months and the second for nearly a year. Downey Jr. claimed he had been addicted to drugs from the age of eight, because his own father, Robert Downey Sr., had been giving them to him, according to the BBC.

Downey Jr.'s been in recovery since 1993, which already makes him a more together dad than his own father, it sounds like. Hopefully he can help his son avoid treading in his father's and grandfather's footsteps.

Cam Gigandet

Gigandet remembers O.C. cast as 'miserable'

Outside of minesweeping in Afghanistan, being a guest star on a teen drama in its third or fourth season has to be one of the worst jobs there is.

By then, everyone seems to hate each other and the show and the fact that they're not movie stars yet (the things we've heard about the latter days of Gossip Girl would curl your hair), and outsiders are bound to get caught in the crossfire.

That's what Cam Gigandet claims happened to him when he guest starred on The O.C. "Ben McKenzie was kind of mean to me. I hadn't done anything at that point and he was a little bit of an ass," he told Elle. "But I love him. I think he's a great actor and I love Southland."

Apparently, McKenzie wasn't the only one making trouble. "I learned a lot. But the things that I remember now — none of them are good. It was only the third or fourth season. Those kids were f—king miserable. They were just — they would not remember their lines on purpose. They were young," Gigandet says.

Here's one way to meet your soccer hero

Cristiano Ronaldo got quite the surprise last week when he returned to his hotel room in Brasilia, Brazil to find a 15-year-old boy waiting in his bed, according to Globo Esporte.

The fan, Yago Leal, evaded security and gained access to the suite via the balcony, waiting for Ronaldo to return on the eve of Portugal's World Cup match against Ghana.

Leal tells the newspaper that Ronaldo posed for a photo and signed an autograph before showing him out without alerting security.

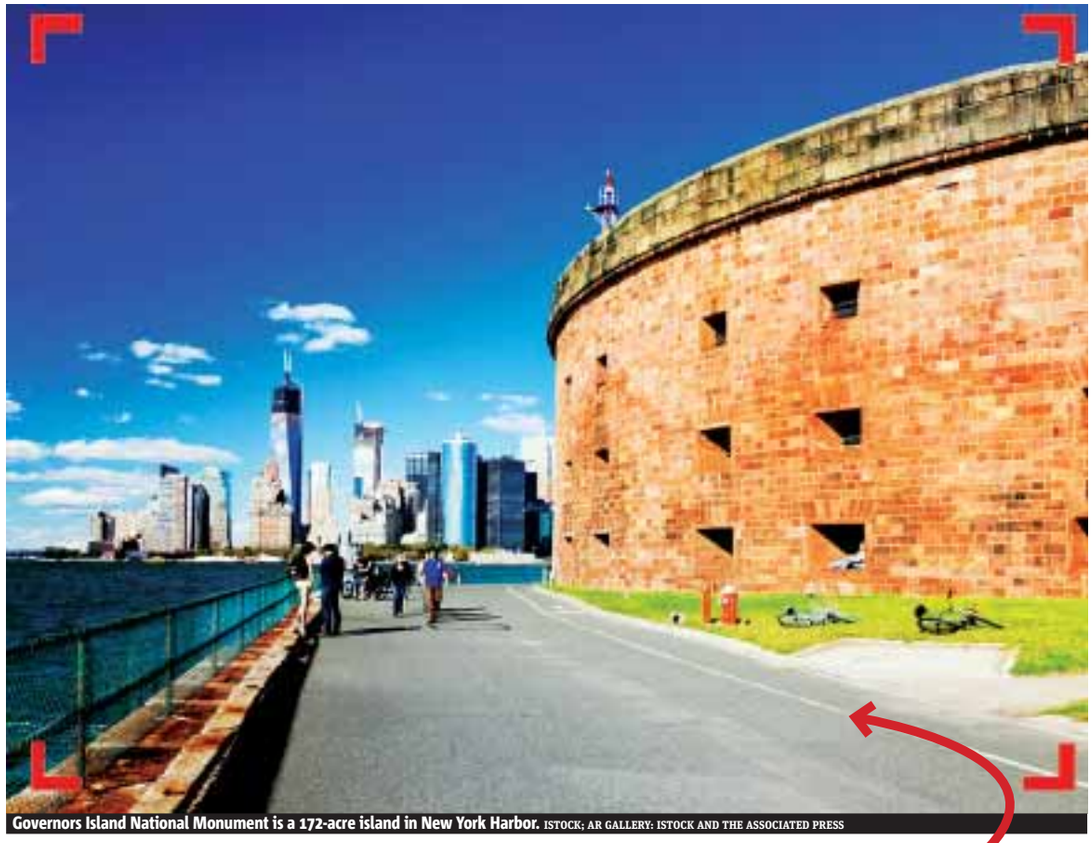
Why not try some island hopping in New York City?

Day tripping. Governors Island and Roosevelt Island offer a respite from the bustle of Manhattan



Governors Island National Monument is a 172-acre island in New York Harbor. ISTOCK; AR GALLERY: ISTOCK AND THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

New York is a city built on water. Four of its five boroughs — Manhattan, Brooklyn, Queens and Staten Island — are located on islands, and the city's rivers and bays are dotted with many more. Two of New York's lesser-known islands make terrific destinations for a summer day trip, filled with history, green spaces and incredible views. And they're easy and fun to get to: Visit Governors Island by ferry and Roosevelt Island by tram.

Governors Island

Governors Island, a former military and U.S. Coast Guard base, has become one of New York City's most beloved day-trip destinations.

The vast green lawns and slopes, winding paths and views make the seven-minute ferry trip from Manhattan feel like a voyage to another world — not that you can forget you're a mere half-mile from Lower Manhattan, with soaring views of 1 World Trade Center and the Statue of Liberty just across the water.

Some of the best views come as you round the bend near Castle Williams, a circular red stone fort that served as a barracks and prison in the decades after its construction in 1811.

The island hosts concerts, children's activities, art shows and whimsical outdoor installations like a giant blue phone receiver in a tree.

It takes less than an hour to stroll around the island, but allow more time for enjoying parks and green spaces like Hammock Grove, with play areas and 50 hammocks. You'll also want to poke your head in historical buildings like the Admiral's House and visit shops like Better Than Jam, which sells locally handmade crafts and products. Food vendors offer everything from Belgian waffles, ice cream and beer, to oysters, sesame noodles and Cuban sandwiches. You can bring bikes on the ferry or rent bikes, tandem bikes and surreys on the island.

The island is open daily through Sept. 28 (Monday-Friday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., weekends and Labour Day until 7 p.m.). Ferries run daily from Lower Manhattan's Battery Maritime Building, 10 South St., near the Staten Island Ferry terminal. Ferries also run weekends from Brooklyn Bridge Park's Pier 6. Round-trip fare, $2 US, with select free ferries weekend mornings; see govisland.com.

Roosevelt Island

You can take the subway to Roosevelt Island, but it's more fun to take the tram from 59th Street and Second Avenue in Manhattan (one-way, $2.50 using a subway MetroCard). The six-minute ride offers views of the city, East River and Ed Koch Queensboro Bridge.

On the Roosevelt Island side, walk 15 minutes south to Franklin D. Roosevelt Four Freedoms Park on a tree-lined path along the river with great views of Manhattan across the way.

Sightseers ride the aerial tramway from Roosevelt Island to NYC. ISTOCK

Near the park entrance, you'll pass the Renwick Ruin, a gothic structure that looks like a horror movie set. It's an abandoned smallpox hospital that dates to the 1850s.

The park, in contrast, offers a sleek, pristine landscape, full of symmetry and angled views. It celebrates President Roosevelt's "Four Freedoms" speech, made in 1941. FDR extolled freedom of speech, freedom of worship, freedom from want and freedom from fear as "essential human freedoms ... attainable in our own time."

An excerpt is engraved on a granite monument; a bust of FDR sits at the island's southern tip. Tree-lined plazas, steps and other structures offer vantage points for seeing the Manhattan skyline; you'll easily pick out the Empire State Building, United Nations, Chrysler Building and 1 World Trade Center.

The park is free, open 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. every day except Tuesday; see fdrfourfreedomspark.org. Dining options on Main Street, not far from the tram, include Italian, Japanese and the Riverwalk Bar and Grill's yummy fish tacos and pulled pork sandwiches.

Bucket list

A wander through the Azores

The nine islands that make up the archipelago of the Azores used to be one of Europe's best-kept secrets. Lush and green despite being made up of 1,766 volcanoes, this autonomous region within the Portuguese state has made great gains since the 1970s, when it was still a relatively poor fishing outpost. Island life in the Azores teems with opportunities for visitors to sail, dive, go deep-sea fishing and explore more than 120 geotourism sites — everything from volcanic caves and ravines to hot springs. The best time to go is August and September. Check out flights from Toronto or Montreal to Ponta Delgada via SATA airlines at sata.pt.

This sandwich used to be a big favourite when I worked in restaurants. Packed with fibre and spiked with a tangy spread, it will keep you going for the rest of the evening. Besides, in the hot summer weather, sandwiches are a great dinner option.

Enjoying the big full flavours of this sandwich with a crisp salad is a great way to round out your meal.

FLASH FOOD

From your fridge to your table in 30 minutes or less

To really make it a great meal, why not pack it up with your favourite local beer or wine and head out to the backyard for a picnic?

Make the most of summer by keeping cool in the kitchen and enjoying delicious food outside.

Also, try grilling up some extra chicken one night to enjoy another time. It takes no effort at all to have extra protein grilling while dinner is being prepared so you can plan ahead for the next night or even a fabulous lunch.

Ingredients

Sandwich Spread
- 1/2 cup (125 ml) plain 0% Greek yogurt
- 1 tbsp (15 ml) balsamic vinegar
- 1 hard cooked egg, chopped
- 2 tsp (10 ml) minced green olives
- 2 tsp (10 ml) minced red bell pepper
- 1/2 tsp (2 ml) Worcestershire sauce

Sandwich
- 4 small slices whole grain bread
2 cups (500 ml) shredded cooked chicken
- 1 1/2 cups (375 ml) shredded cabbage
- 1 tomato, sliced
- 4 small slices light style Swiss cheese

This recipe makes four servings. EMILY RICHARDS

1. Sandwich Spread: In a small bowl, stir together the Greek yogurt balsamic vinegar, cooked and finely chopped egg, minced green olives, minced red bell pepper and Worcestershire sauce. Divide evenly among bread and spread. Top with chicken, cabbage and tomato. Lay one slice of cheese on each sandwich.

2. Place the prepared sandwiches on a baking sheet and bake them in 400 F (200 C) oven for about 10 minutes or until the cheese melts and bread is slightly toasted.

Defining 'hearty salad'

This Grilled Chickpea Salad with Red Onion and Sourdough serves six. MATTHEW MEAD/ THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ingredients
- Juice of 1 lemon
- 4 tbsp olive oil, divided
- 3 cloves garlic, minced
- 1 tsp dried oregano
- 1/2 tsp ground cumin
- 1/2 tsp kosher salt
- 1/4 tsp ground black pepper
- 1 large red onion, cut into thin rounds
- 1 large red bell pepper, cored and cut into strips
- 15-oz can chickpeas, drained
- 1 tsp garlic powder
- 1 tsp smoked paprika
- 1 loaf (about 19 ounces) sour dough bread, cut into 2-inch croutons
- 5-oz container arugula

1. Heat a grill to high. Set a perforated grilling pan on the grill directly over the heat source.

2. In bowl, whisk lemon juice, 2 tablespoons of the olive oil, the garlic, oregano, cumin, salt and pepper. Set aside.

3. In a medium bowl, combine the onion, bell pepper, chickpeas, garlic powder, smoked paprika and 1 tablespoon of oil, tossing to coat evenly. When the grilling pan is very hot, transfer the mixture to the pan. Cook, stirring often, until the onions and peppers are lightly browned and tender, 8 to 10 minutes. Transfer mix to a clean serving bowl. Set aside.

4. In a bowl, toss croutons with the remaining 1 tablespoon of oil. Place the croutons directly on the grill grate. Cook, turning often, until lightly browned and crisp. Use tongs to transfer croutons to bowl of chickpeas and vegetables. Add arugula, then toss well to slightly wilt the arugula. Drizzle dressing over the salad, then toss again to coat. Divide between 6 serving plates. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Hello, can I speak to my future hire?

Dial-a-disaster. Many first interviews are conducted over the horn, so heed this advice to avoid a communication crash

LAUREN MARINIGH
TalentEgg.ca

Put yourself in professional mode when chatting to your potential employer by picking yourself up out of bed and docking yourself at a desk. ISTOCK

When you think of a job interview, it's likely that you'll picture a traditional face-to-face process.

However, many employers choose to do a first round of interviews over the phone.

Phone interviews can be intimidating, particularly if your previous interview experience has always involved on-site, in-person meetings. Don't worry; a little preparation can go a long way.

Here are a few ways that phone interviews can go wonky — so avoid, avoid, avoid.

Not being prepared

This goes without saying, but make sure you understand all the details of the interview.

Do your research on the company, read over the job description, and practise sample questions that you think might come up during the interview.

You'll also want to confirm all of the logistical details: who will be calling, when, and at what number. If the employer is calling you, be ready well in advance.

Double-check you have good reception, ensure that you are the one answering the phone, and set up all the resources you need on hand before you pick up (notebook, resumé, job description, etc.).

I'd like to call a friend

If you haven't had much experience making business phone calls, try phoning a pal and comparing your interaction to the conversations you've had with an employer or in a traditional interview.

Not acting professional

Remember that every interview is a professional undertaking, even if it isn't conducted in a formal workplace.

Part of the challenge of phone interviews is presenting yourself in a professional manner without the ease of in-person interaction.

If you haven't had much experience making business phone calls, try phoning a pal and comparing your interaction to the conversations you've had with an employer or in a traditional interview.

Do not eat or drink during your interview, and make sure that you are in a quiet setting with a phone that has a full battery.

To save yourself from embarrassment, make sure to tell everyone else in your household that you are using the phone for an interview — this way, you won't get your parents picking it up in another room, awkwardly interrupting.

Other things that can help put you in the professional mindset include sitting in a professional setting or area (think desk, not bed), and dressing for success.

Not closing the interview effectively

Just like you would in an in-person interview, ask questions. Always have a list prepared in advance and pick a few that the interviewer might not have answered during your conversation.

This is your chance to get a better idea of the work environment, and whether you could see yourself working there.

Don't forget to close by thanking the interviewer before saying goodbye.

U.S. sub-marined by Belgian onslaught

World Cup. American 'keeper's 16 saves not enough as Belgium finally breaks through in wild extra-time clash

Kevin De Bruyne turned a heroic night for U.S. goalkeeper Tim Howard into defeat on Tuesday, with an extra-time goal and an assist that gave Belgium a 2-1 victory and a quarter-final match against Lionel Messi and Argentina.

With three extra-time goals in a thrilling match, De Bruyne and substitute Romelu Lukaku gave Belgium a big lead before Julian Green closed the gap with 12 minutes to go.

"For my heart, please don't give me too many games like this," said Belgium coach Marc Wilmots.

Belgium's unyielding attacks for 90 minutes on Tuesday only highlighted the great performance of the 35-year-old Howard, but the U.S. finally wilted in the evening heat once extra time came.

Three minutes in, Lukaku found space on the right and passed into the centre. At first, the ball was poked out before De Bruyne gained possession. Belgium's creative genius had the energy for a sharp move and his low shot missed the yellow foot of Howard and settled inside the post.

"The levee is going to break at some point," said Howard.

In the 105th minute, Belgium looked like it had put the game away. De Bruyne launched Lukaku into open space on the left and the Everton striker beat his club teammate Howard with a drive to the near post.

The Americans got late hope when Green pulled one back in the 107th with a sterling volley on the turn that Thibaut Courtois could only touch before he saw it fly into his net.

With almost no work at all in 120 minutes, Courtois turned out to be more decisive than Howard had been, stopping a late flurry for the equalizer from the Americans. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Argentina-Swiss. Messi sent an Angel in Rio

Angel Di Maria scored deep into extra time Tuesday to give Argentina a 1-0 win over Switzerland and a spot in the World Cup quarter-finals.

With a penalty shootout looming, Lionel Messi made a surging run toward the Swiss area in the 118th minute and laid the ball off to Di Maria on the right.

The winger struck a left-foot shot past diving goalkeeper Diego Benaglio, prompting the Argentine bench to jump out on the field to celebrate the goal.

Swiss substitute Blerim Dzemaili nearly equalized right before the end but his header hit the post, and the rebound bounced off his knee and wide of the goal.

The result at Sao Paulo's Itaquerao Stadium continued Argentina's record of scraping by with narrow wins at this World Cup. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Iggy moves to Mile High City in search of a cup

Jarome Iginla felt a little more youthful on his 37th birthday even as he became the old man of the Colorado Avalanche.

He's energized by the challenge of not only trying to keep up with the likes of speedy forward Nathan MacKinnon, who is half Iginla's age, but also of helping this rising squad take another step in its growth.

"I don't want to be arrogant, but I still believe I can be very good," said Iginla, who celebrated his birthday Tuesday by signing a three-year, $16-million deal with Colorado. "And this is a dynamic group. I think they work hard and they're committed, and they're just going to keep getting better and better." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Canucks sign veteran G Miller

The Vancouver Canucks acquired a much-needed veteran goalie Tuesday, signing free agent Ryan Miller to a three-year deal worth $18 million US.

The Canucks needed a proven netminder after trading Cory Schneider and Roberto Luongo in the past 13 months and missing the playoffs this season. Miller was seen as the best goalie on the free-agent market.

"I felt it was important to get a goalie with experience," said Canucks general manager Jim Benning. "Over the years he's played a lot of games. He gives us that experience that we need." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Raonic, Bouchard advance to quarters

Wimbledon. Canadian players' paths made easier by early upsets

Milos Raonic joined Eugenie Bouchard in the quarter-finals of Wimbledon as the talented pair continued their run at the record books.

Eighth seed Raonic achieved his best career showing at the All England Club on Tuesday with a 4-6, 6-1, 7-6 (4), 6-3 fourth-round win over Japanese 10th seed Kei Nishikori.

Raonic becomes just the second Canadian to reach the Wimbledon quarter-finals in the Open era, which began in 1968.

He next faces Australian wild card Nick Kyrgios, who shocked second seed Rafael Nadal with a 7-6 (5), 5-7, 7-6 (5), 6-2 win later Tuesday.

Bouchard made her way there on Monday with a defeat of Alizé Cornet. She will face off in the next round against German ninth seed Angelique Kerber, who upset fifth seed Maria Sharapova 7-6 (7-4), 4-6, 6-4, winning on a seventh match point.

Bouchard hammered Kerber in the French Open fourth round a month ago.

"The match against Bouchard will be a tough one," said Kerber. "I lost against her in Paris, but I'm feeling right now better and I'm feeling better on grass."

Raonic laid down 34 aces in his victory over Nishikori, who is coached by former French Open winner Michael Chang. Raonic broke three times, saved five break points against his serve and ended with 64 winners in the comprehensive victory.

"I've been serving in general well this tournament, and even throughout the clay court season," said Raonic. "But obviously here it sort of gets exemplified a little bit more. It's a little bit more on display."

In men's doubles, veteran Daniel Nestor of Toronto and Serbian partner Nenad Zimonjic reached the quarter-finals over Pablo Cuevas of Uruguay and David Marrero of Spain 7-6 (8), 6-4, 6-4.

2015 Ford Fiesta ST

- Type. Five-door, front-wheel-drive subcompact hatchback
- Engines (hp). 1.6-litre inline four-cylinder (197)
- Transmission. Six-speed manual
- Base price. $26,064

Market position

Well-known European "hot hatch" now available in North America. Looks the part, goes the part. Targeted at driving enthusiasts, as evidenced by only one transmission offering (the six-speed manual), the hot turbo engine, and many handling upgrades. ST, for Sport Technologies, is Ford's global performance badge.

Points

- One of the quickest "little" cars you can buy.
- Engine sounds actually fed into interior cabin for sporty ambience.
- Exemplary cornering — flat with no understeer.
- Sits 15 mm closer to the ground that other Fiesta models.
- Still quite fuel-efficient — 5.6/7.8 City/Highway L/100 km

The ST offers lots of torque and launches easily.

Safety

Six standard air bags; four-wheel disc brakes with ABS; stability control with engine torque vectoring and with three selectable modes; tire pressure monitoring system; child seat anchors; anti-theft engine immobilizer.

One engaging little beast of a car

Review. The Ford Fiesta ST is not just a Fiesta with a different badge. It's a completely different animal.

MIKE GOETZ
drive@metronews.ca

The Ford Fiesta ST is a great "hot hatch" in the European tradition.

But while Europe has had a Fiesta ST since 2005, this 2014 model is the first for North America.

Unlike Europe, our Fiesta only comes in four-door sedans and five-door hatches, so our new five-door ST doesn't look quite as cool as Europe's new three-door ST coupe, or for that matter, the three-door factory Fiesta rally car, which is piloted by racer and YouTube stunt driver sensation Ken Bock.

But four doors or not, this thing rocks.

The exterior bits that make ST more visually sporting — one-of-a-kind grille and chin spoiler, rear diffuser and spoiler, dual exhaust tips, and unique 17-inch wheels — are agreeably understated.

It feels more racy on the inside, primarily because our tester was flaunting the optional leather-trimmed RECARO seats — in "hurt your eyes" red. These seats are super firm and have huge side bolsters.

The ST is the most expensive Fiesta you can buy, so the rest of the inside is packed with stuff, like SYNC with MyFord Touch, a 6.5-inch LCD screen and the 80-watt stereo.

The ST features a 6.5-inch LCD screen and an 80-watt stereo.

But ST is all about the driving experience. First thing you notice is how much torque this thing has, and how easily it launches. Ford says 177 lb-ft is available from just 1,600 rpm and that maximum torque (214 lb-ft) can be had by 3,500 rpm — and you can believe it.

The engine is exclusively mated to a slick-shifting six-speed manual transmission. No automatic. Rowing through the gears is a motivational and audible treat. Powertrain sounds are actually fed directly into the cabin to enhance the sporty experience. ST features upgraded braking and suspension and steering, compared to regular Fiesta models. It also features electronic Torque Vectoring Control, to reduce understeer during hard cornering, and a three-mode stability system (off, standard, sport).

This translates to a very entertaining experience through traffic and in twisty bits along your journey. It has virtually no body lean and can change lanes with a flick of the steering wheel. The stiff "summer" performance tires can't help smooth out the bumps very much, but that would be one of the few caveats of this very engaging little beast.

1 Fiat 500 Abarth
Base price: $26,190
Fiat 500's performance model looks good, sounds better. Its 1.4-litre turbo makes 160 hp. Manual is a five-speed.

2 Mini Cooper S
Base price:$27,490
The all-new 2015 Mini S features a 2.0-litre turbo capable of 189 horses. Lots of fun in a practical package.

3 Chevrolet Sonic RS
Base price: $25,645
Not in the same performance league as the others, but lots of bang for the buck.

Horoscopes

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
You have every reason to be confident but don't start believing that nothing can go wrong. Your social life may be fun but is there something of a more serious nature you should be taking care of.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
Something good will come your way today. Others may say you don't deserve to be so fortunate but only because they wish they had been as creative and as hard-working as you.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
You seem to be in a positive mood now that Mercury, your ruler, is moving in your favour again. However, other aspects warn this is no time to rest on your laurels. There is still more good you can do in the world.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
For best results today don't limit yourself to tried and trusted ways of doing things. Use your imagination to dream up new ideas and new ways of living, laughing and loving.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
Find a quiet place where you can be alone with your thoughts and start asking some serious questions of the "who am I?" and "what should I be doing with my life?" variety. The answers may surprise you.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
What seemed difficult a while ago now seems so simple, which just goes to show how a change of attitude can lead to a change of fortune. Prove you're a force to be reckoned with.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
Listen to your inner voice today because it offers good advice you won't get from others. The answers you seek are not "out there" in the world but hidden in the depths of your heart.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
You may not want to hurt someone's feelings but you know you have to be honest. There comes a time when it is necessary to tell it like it is, even if it means putting a relationship or friendship at risk.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Stop looking at your problems so emotionally. Your feelings must not be allowed to come into it, especially where money and business issues are concerned. Practical problems require practical solutions.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
What a friend has to tell you today may not be what you were hoping to hear but the important thing is it's what you need to hear. Are you smart enough to realize you don't know all the answers?

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
Your ability to tune in to how others think and feel will bring benefits, especially on the work front where sudden changes won't take you as much by surprise as they do some.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
Your confidence is making a return now that mind planet Mercury is no longer such a negative influence, and by the end of the week you will be the life of the party. SALLY BROMPTON
